

Self-Isolation pack for those testing positive for COVID-19

Thank you for reading this pack. Self-isolating for 10 days when you have tested positive for COVID-19, regardless of how you are feeling, is a crucially important step in preventing the spread of the virus and stopping the NHS in our local area from becoming overwhelmed.

You and your entire household must self-isolate for 10 days from the start of your COVID-19 symptoms or the date of your test if asymptomatic.

By self-isolating, you are helping protect your loved ones and your community; you could genuinely be saving a life.

Advice for how to treat COVID-19 symptoms at home can be found here: <https://www.nhs.uk/conditions/coronavirus-covid-19/self-isolation-and-treatment/how-to-treat-symptoms-at-home/>

However, if your symptoms worsen please contact your GP or call 111 for more advice. After 10 days have passed if your symptoms have got better you can stop self-isolating. If you need advice and support with recovery from COVID-19 symptoms that last longer than 10 days, please visit <https://www.yourcovidrecovery.nhs.uk/>

Thank you for self-isolating and helping play your part to keep West Berkshire safe.

Self-isolating: What does it mean?

Simply put self-isolating means you cannot leave your house for any reason. If anyone one in your house has tested positive for COVID-19, or has COVID-19 symptoms and is awaiting a test result, no one in the house is permitted to leave until the full self-isolation period has finished or a negative test result is returned. It is a legal requirement to tell your employer you have been asked to self-isolate and it is illegal for your employer to require you to come into the workplace during the self-isolation period.

If a member of your household has been identified as a 'close contact' of someone outside of your household, they are not permitted to leave the house until they have completed their self-isolation period. However, the rest of the household are able to leave their house during this time. No one should seek a COVID-19 test unless they have symptoms or have been instructed to by a clinician.

Self-Isolating is a legal requirement. You can be fined if you fail to self-isolate.

Support when self-isolating

Self-isolating will at times be frustrating and challenging, especially if you are feeling unwell or lose out on income due to not being able to work. We want to help support our residents to self-isolate, here are some of the ways you can seek support if you need it.

COVID Winter Grant Scheme

If you are in financial hardship due to the pandemic you may be eligible for financial support from the COVID Winter Grant Scheme which is open until the 15 March 2021.

NHS Test and Trace Support Payment

If you have been told by the NHS Test and Trace Service to self-isolate, either because you have tested positive for coronavirus (COVID-19) or you have been in contact with someone who has tested positive, you may be entitled to some financial support during your self-isolation period. Please note that you are not entitled to financial support if you have only been advised to self-isolate by the NHS COVID-19 app.

Keeping a balanced lifestyle whilst self-isolating

Having to spend 10 days self-isolating may seem daunting, so it's good to keep a balanced routine in order to help boost your mental and physical health.

You may want to plan out your days and think about activities you can do throughout your self-isolation period, what you decide to do will vary, depending on how you are feeling.

You may want to think about ways of staying in touch with friends or family, ways of being creative or active at home such as indoor exercise or painting and ways to look after yourself such as practicing mindfulness or doing something you find relaxing like taking a bath or reading.

You could think about planning your day based around the 5 Ways of Wellbeing: connect, stay active, keep learning, take notice and give to others.

- Speaking to family and friends (phone, post or online)
- Talking about my worries to someone I trust

- Getting some exercise at home
- Drinking water

- Making a list or setting goals
- Doing things I enjoy (reading, cooking, listening to radio, watching TV, playing games, crosswords, jigsaws, painting)
- Learning something new

- Planning things to look forward to
- Wearing bright comfortable clothes
- Writing my thoughts down in a journal
- Deep breathing

- Phone someone I know
- Thinking about 3 good things that happened each day

It's also important to make sure you are eating a balanced diet and especially concentrating on eating at least 5 portions of fruit and vegetables a day. Vegetables are rich in vitamins and minerals that help our body's immune system and digestive system. Make sure you also keep hydrated by drinking 6-7 glasses of water a day.
